PREFACE

In an old Bible which belonged to my father, Dr. Charles Minor, and which is now in my possession, he wrote the following memorandum in 1853:

“THE MINOR FAMILY OF VIRGINIA.”

“Dr. Charles Minor and all his Minor kindred are descended from a Dutchman named Doodes Minor who was admitted to full citizenship in 1673 by an act of Assembly found in ‘Hennings Statutes at Large,’ Vol, 2, page 308. That act is as follows:

“’(Where as it was enacted in 1671 that any stranger desiring to make this country the place of their constance residence, might upon their petition to the Grand Assembly, and taking the oath of allegence and supremecy be admitted to a naturalization: where upon John Peterson, Rolland Anderson, Michael Vanlandiman, Maindort Doodes, Doodes Minor and Herman Kilderman: Aliens making humble suite as afore said: Bee it there fore enacted by the Governour, Council, and Burgesses of this Grand Assembly and by the Authority there of that the said John Peterson, Rolland Anderson, Michael Vanlandiman, Maindort Doodes, Doodes Minor and Herman Kilderman. Aliens and every of them bee and are by virtue here of and the afore recited laws where on this is grounded; capable of free traffique and trading, of taking up and purchasing, conveying, devising, and inheriting of lands and tennaments and from hence forth be and are declared deemed and holden in all constructions of Law; Elated, vested and indulged with all privileges and liberty that any natural born Englishman is capable of according to the time and meaning of the said Act).’

“Doodes Minor settled on the Rappahannock and its waters in the County of Middlesex. He had four sons: Garret Minor, Minor Minor, John Minor and Peter Minor. Garret Minor had a daughter named Diana and a son John, who was the father of Col. Garret Minor, of ‘Sunning Hill,’ Louisa Co., Vivian Minor of ‘Spring Field,’ Caroline Co., Dabney Minor of ‘Wood Lawn,’ Orange Co., James Minor of ‘Gale Hill,’ Albemarle Co., Peter Minor of Petersburg, Thomas Minor of Spottsylvania Co., and John Minor of ‘Topping Castle,’ Caroline Co. There was also a William Minor of Spottsylvania Co., whose will is dated 1757 and endorsed (besides other witnesses) by Thomas Minor, giving all his estate to his mother. Doodes Minor's son, Peter, was apprenticed by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Minor (Cocke once) to a Boston Ship Captain, John Phillips, in 1677, to learn the art and mysteries of navigation; and afterwards ran away from his Master and never came home. A letter from him to his brother Garret written at Rotterdam, was in possession, I think, of the second Garret's son, Samuel O. Minor. I once made a copy of this letter which was burned by a kinswoman, disliking the humble life in which it exhibited her Collateral Ancestor."

It was the above memorandum which first led me to investigate the Minor genealogy; and after many years of careful work have collected what is contained in this book. My researches extended into many states, and a number of those whose names can be found in this record have given me great help and valuable information.

I also consulted a number of Parish Records as to dates, etc., with success. I purposely avoided using any information that after careful investigation, I could not prove authentic. Therefore, I believe this record is as correct as it is possible for it to be made.

My researches have proved to me that those contained in this record are descended from MAINDORT DOODES, a Dutchman, who was naturalized with his son, Doodes Minor, and others, as will be seen from Act as mentioned before. There are some who think he was an Englishman; but if so, why should he be naturalized when coming to an English Colony as Virginia was at that time? Maindort Doodes was a Dutch Sea Captain. His will was sealed with his signet ring bearing the impress of a Dutch ship of the 17th Century. And in his will he mentions his son, Doodes Minor.

Doodes Minor had five sons. I follow in this record his son Garret. Some of the other sons may have had descendants. I have met with many Minors who are not descended from Garret. Possibly they are descendants of Doodes Minor's other sons.

As to the arrangement of this record, I have tried to make it as plain and concise as possible. Each person is numbered. Only those who become parents are brought forward with their number and their children given. A Miss Minor who marries other than a Minor is brought forward, her children given and then they are dropped.

This arrangement with numbers can be continued indefinitely.

May 29th, 1922.

JOHN B. MINOR.

THE MINOR FAMILY OF VIRGINIA

“AN INTERESTING NAME”

“There are few subjects of greater interest to Genealogist and Philologist than the study of the origin and meaning of names. Especially is this true of surnames. Many volumes have exploited them and dictionaries been devoted to them, histories are well nigh innumerable. Hardly a cognomen of consequence whether of English, Irish, Welsh or Scottish origin fails to receive mention in one or more histories of names that are to be seen in any well ordered library. Of American names, however, those that have arisen on American soil or are peculiar to it, the lists are universally silent. This is to be expected. In our brief history very few surnames have arisen. Such a process of change and development is one of long centuries.

“Nevertheless there is a goodly number of family names that may be correctly termed American; since they have either found their origin here or have been so radically altered in spelling and pronunciation since their coming, that they no longer bear a resemblance to those from which they sprung.

“Of this class purely American in origin the distinguished name of MINOR in Virginia is a notable example. This fact of American nativity is a unique distinction in itself—but the name has another equally distinctive attribute that must be noted likewise. It is one of the very small group of surnames that have arisen from the place or position of an individual in a family.

“To those interested in such matters it is a well known fact that there are numberless names from animals such as Fox and Lamb; names from birds as Peacock and Sparrow; names from places as Oldham and Shrewsburg; names from personal character as Doughty and Dold; names from bodily variations as Short and Long; names from colors as Green and Blue; names from occupation as Wheelwright and Chapman, and names from inanimate objects as House and Stone. These are numerous, but in the contrary, names from the relative position in the family are proportionately rare. Elder, is one belonging to this small class. Minor (junior) is another.

“Names ending in son, though somewhat different in their nature, belong in a sense to this group also.

“When such a uniqueness of source and meaning is claimed for the venerable Virginian name of MINOR; something more than mere fiction and fancy appears by way of substantiation. The hypothesis upon which it rests is in no wise strained. That it is purely an American name and that it falls within the narrow list of names from individual's family position seems indisputable from several varied facts. At a period approximately the year of grace 1650, quite a number of highly respected and enterprising Dutchmen settled in Virginia, and founded families. Among them was one MAINDORT DOODES, a wealthy Holland merchant and ship owner; who is spoken of in the old records first of Nansemond County and later as of Lancaster.

“Along with four other compatriots Maindort Doodes and his son DOODES MINOR were naturalized by an act of ‘a Grand Assembly holden in James Cittie the twentieth day of September in the twenty-third year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord the King that now is, and in the year of our Lord 1671.’ They were to have all rights and privileges including those of free traffique and trading that were allowed to any natural born Englishman of the colony.

“Strangely enough the Statute (now of record in Hennings Statutes at Large of Virginia) mentioned the father as Maindort Doodes and the son as Doodes Minor. However, the elder Doodes in his will dated and proved in 1677, signed his name Maindort Doodes and the same time referred therein to his son as Doodes Minor as did the Statutes of Assembly.

“It is to be reasonably, if not necessarily, inferred from this, therefore that by styling his son Minor, he meant the ‘younger,’ or as is more usual, ‘junior.’ So it would seem that the Christian name of the Doodes was Maindort which the act of 1671 translated into Minor and that he intended to designate his son as ‘junior.’ The son, however, came to employ the designation suffixed thereafter as a cognomen rather than the parental Doodes, a fact probably due to a local custom by way of contradistinction between father and son; and thus it fell that through him a new name was transmitted to his descendants which persists even to this day—an honorable and honored name that has taken unto itself through the years a considerable fame and prestage through Virginia and the South."

THE STORY OF MARY WATERS AND THE RED CLOAK

The fearful convulsions of 1610 had rended Old England in every fiber and muscle, leaving not a heart or home, even the most humble, free from its passion and pain.

The hour is sun-set and in the glooming beneath the great, spreading branches of an oak; so venerable that the Druids themselves might well have worshipped under its protecting shades; stands two: beautiful in youth; strong in love and thruth; pledging a troth, faithful unto death.

The girl is fair, full of strength of mind and body; willing in those stormy times to face dangers and conquer them. Mary in faith is a Roman Catholic, which has placed her high in favor with the Queen. The red cloak that so gracefully enfolds her, is a present from Catherine Braganza herself; and it protects her from the chilling fogs that are gathering around them; it reminds her, too, of the inseperable barrier between her lover and herself,—his faith and fortune had been pledged to the peerless Cromwell and the noble cause of freedom.

Now all is lost,—he stands with only one ray of hope: the love he has pledged brightening all the future; making all things possible to him.

But ere the joy of that sweet hour has past, her faithful nurse rushes upon the scene, trembling with fear, and imploring young Overton to fly, for the place is even now filled with the soldiers of King Charles, searching for him; that the gallant General Overton, who swore to defend Hull until the “Advent of Christ,” had been cast into prison, and all of his name were under ban. Alas! Where should he flee? Misery and persecution filled even the uttermost parts of the land. Mary does not hesitate but conducts him to one of those secret chambers so frequently found in houses of that period. There he is concealed for many days; happily ignorant, in his excess of misery, that the commander of the troop, a gallant cavalier, has fallen a victim to the charms of Mary and swears she shall be his wife. She quails not before the trouble that besets her, but with her red cloak fastened closely around her, and, guided by her faithful nurse, at midnight, she conducts her lover safely to a vessel bound for the New World. The captain is the son of the good old nurse, and through her entreaties consents to carry William Overton to the shores of the “Virgin Land,” away from persecution and tyranny; but alas! also away from a love surpassing the love of woman.

Mary, left alone to confront a love backed by wealth and power; forced upon her by her parents and the king, and knowing even were this presumptuous lover removed, never would her Catholic parents consent to her marriage with a “Round Head.”

Time presses,—the brave girl is not baffled; a few tears and entreaties induce that faithful nurse to use again her influence with her son; and disguised as a Gypsy maiden, but with her little fortune of a thousand pounds carefully concealed in her precious red cloak, Mary again enters the ship bound for Virginia,—Love, Life and Happiness.

It is not strange that young Overton; exiled from all that is dear to him; longing for some word of his own true love; should be among the first to board the vessel when she touched at Yorktown; and when asking some word of her, should be conducted by his friend, the Captain, to the other side of the ship, where blushing and trembling and nestling close to the side of her faithful old nurse, stood Mary Waters, with her red cloak clasped around her lovely form. Need I add that ere they leave the vessel that has been the sweet ark of refuge, they are united in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony?

When Col. John Overton heard of the birth of his first grand-daughter, at “Woodstock,” Louisa County, December 6th, 1814, he came up from Hanover County and had her christened “Mary Waters Terrell;” now wife of William W. Minor (237), of “Gale Hill,” Albemarle County, Va.

Another son of Col. Garret Minor, of “Sunning Hill” (23)—we called him “Uncle Obe,”—married Miss Lewis. He was a rolling stone and gathered no moss. I have heard that his father, Col. Garret Minor, gave him "Sunning Hill," but encumbered with a legacy to some other member of the family. "Uncle Obe" was never able to lift the legacy and the place became the property of his brother, Dr. James Minor.

He was always joking and making fun. When I last saw him, before he moved to Missouri with his numerous family, he was constable and peace officer of Charlottesville, Virginia.

I recollect that it seemed to me very funny that he should be expected to make people behave. I think you would have judged his frivolity to border on irreverence. Why sir, if he did not originate that scandalous tale about Mary Waters being transported for "stealing" a red cloak: he elaborated and propagated it. I am sure he said too, that she was sent over from Holland and was short and dumpy like the Dutch, and that was where the Minors got their stubby figure, and with much more of the same sort,—fretful to the hearts of the faithful. Sir, he went so far as to openly advance the opinion that our favorite Doodles was, in a worse than Pickwickian sense, a humbug. Said he came down to Virginia from "Yankee Land" to hide, that he caused himself to be naturalized under a fictitious name; that his real name was Judas Minor! He refused to name a son after him, alleging that the act of naturalization left it uncertain whether the name was Doodles Minor or Minor Doodles, and he jumbled him up with some fellow, Minor Minor,—in a manner very provoking to the lover of truth and the honor of the family.

We will see whether a plain tale cannot put down this "Uncle Obe," when we come to learn the other side about Mary Waters as related by the Overtons.

The above was copied from a letter from Thomas S. Watson (189) to Minor Meriwether (269), of St. Louis.

The following is a copy of a letter from Albert L. Holladay (638), written while a prisoner in Fort Delaware. The letter was written very closely on both sides of a thin piece of paper, $5\frac{1}{4}$ x $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches. It was folded and put in a button and the button sewed to Mr. Davis' hat so as to cock it upon one side; as all the buttons sewed to Mr. Davis' coat were filled with similar letters. Mr. Davis brought them through the lines to Southern friends.

A. L. Holladay (638), was a member of the Charlottesville Artillery, Cutstraws Battalion, 2nd Corps Army of Northern Virginia. He was taken prisoner at the Battle of Spottsylvania C. H. and was exchanged. Mr. Davis was a member of his company.

Fort Delaware, Sept. 18, 1864.

Dearest Mother:

Davis expects to go to "Dixie" in a few days so I must take the opportunity of sending you a letter by an U. G. R. R. I have little to say, however, that I cannot write by Flag of Truce. You will want to know how we fare. Our rations are not quite as much as we would like, but those who are provided with money as I am, need not suffer for anything to eat. We have two meals a day. For breakfast, bread and meat; and dinner, bread, meat and soup. The meat is sometimes bacon, and sometimes beef: we also sometimes have a potato in addition at dinner. We have vinegar issued to us twice a week and soap about once in two weeks. There is a sutler from whom we can buy bread, cheese, molasses, coffee, cakes and various other things. We can also buy milk and pies inside the barracks. We are in pretty comfortable barracks. The water in the summer was quite warm, though better than it was two years ago. It is very good now. Of course, there are some things very unpleasant, such as being under Yankee rule even for a while. Also the confinement, though we have the liberty of a little over four acres. But what is hardest is the entire separation from those we love; and the uncertainty as to when we will be restored to them. But I have far more to be thankful for than to complain of. My health is excellent and God has raised up friends to me who have kindly provided my every want. I will tell you how I happened to find so kind a friend in Mrs. Fowle: Mr. Chancellor, a Baptist Minister from Spottsylvania County, who had been arrested and sent to this place, was the means of my good fortune. He knew most of Grandpa's family and soon after we came here, he sent for me and told me that a friend of his here, had heard that Uncle Lewis was here, and that if it was so, she would like to do anything in her power for his comfort. Mr. C. advised me to write to her; telling her that Uncle Lewis was not here; stating who I was, and my circumstances and see if she would not extend her kindness to me. I did so, saying that I had been unfortunate enough to lose everything when I was captured, and hoping that the circumstances in which I was placed, might be some excuse for the great liberty I had taken. I received in answer the kindest letter imaginable. She sent me $25.00 from Mr. Fowle and told me to write at once and give her my size; and she would send me clothing immediately. She assured me she did not feel that I had taken a liberty, that she had a brother in the C. Army and could sympathize with me; that it was a great pleasure to her to help any of her people (as she was a Virginian, she said) who needed assistance. I told you of my receiving the box containing clothes and eatables. It is now against orders for us to receive boxes from Northern friends or I have no doubt I would have received further kindnesses from her. I told you in my letter of the receipt of $10.00 from Mr. D. L. Enos; he said that Miss Nancy Emerson had written to his father-in-law, but that he being away he sent me the money at once as I might be in need of it. My health continues to be excellent. I sent you a ring not long ago by Mr. Jenkins. I have received four letters from you since I have been here; the last dated August 27th. I have also received two from Waller, and two from Christianna. I am afraid the prospect of exchanges is rather bad at present—but you can judge better than I can. We are only allowed to see one paper here and that is a notorious liar. We hear all kinds of rumors; but cannot tell what to believe. Instead of complaining of my lot at being taken prisoner I should be very thankful that I was not killed as were so many others. That battle cost the lives of 8 of our Company. It was by far the hottest battle I was ever in. I hardly think that we would have been captured if the infantry had stood their ground as well as we did. When we were taken the Yankees were almost entirely around us and the infantry had almost all left. Although the infantry had almost left I believed it my duty to stand to the guns to the last, for I hoped that reinforcements might come up. My first feeling when I was taken was one of bitter hatred towards the Yankees, and chagrin that they had gained the breast works,—my next thought was of you; how hard it would be on you,—how much harder than on me. We were carried from the field accompanied by a heavy guard. They pushed us along very rapidly; a good part of the time at a double-quick, until we got within a mile of Fredericksburg,—there we spent a most dismal night. It was raining; but though dark there was no chance for escape; the guards were so very thick. The next day we were carried to Belle Plains Landing, at the mouth of Potomac Creek. We were left there until the 8th when we embarked for Fort Delaware. The trip from there to here was the hardest thing I have ever gone through as a soldier. It was very warm, and we were crowded in the hull of the vessel, so very closely together that we nearly suffocated. We did not, however, have rough weather, which would have made it much worse. If you receive this just say in your answer, I have received yours 28th. Give my love to all my uncles. I suppose nothing has been heard from J. Halback. I am afraid he was certainly killed. Keep up a cheerful heart, dear Mother, only let me find you all well when I get back and all will be well. I need not tell you how I long for the time to come when I will once more see you all again. God grant it may not be far distant. Always tell me how your health is. Tell Birta she must be a very good girl, now that I am so far away. Is Ellen still with you? If so, give my love to her, and tell her I would be most glad to receive that letter. I wrote an answer to W's last letter, not many days ago. Give my love to all at "Prospect Hill," also Aunt C's and Aunt E's and M. J.'s. With a heart full of love to all.

Your devoted son Albert (638).

DR. GEORGE GILMER'S REVOLUTIONARY RECORD

A company from Albemarle County, under the command of Lieut. Geo. Gilmer, marched from Charlottesville, Va., July 11, 1775; got to Waller's Grove, Williamsburg, Va., July 13th. See Va. His. Collection, Vol. 6, New Series, p. 89.

—Wm. T. Robins

I certify that the above is a true copy of what it purports to be.

Phillip A. Bruce, Cor. Secy.

Dr. Gilmer also was Member H. B., in 1774. This will enable any of his female descendants to become Members of Colonial Dames. He was also Member of Convention of 1775. See 84.

The following was sent to me by Col. W. H. Stuart (587) and given to Col. W. H. Stuart by G. F. Edwards:

AN INTERESTING WAR INCIDENT OF 1865.

On the retreat, just before the surrender, the Confederate Army, consisting of a mere handful of foot-sore, weary soldiers, had been on forced marches and without food for three days. On Friday afternoon preceding the surrender on Sunday morning; we were overtaken by the enemy and had time just to form line; and throw up a small breast-work perhaps a foot high, when they swept down on us in overwhelming numbers.

A piece of artillery (from Charlottesville or Albemarle battery, I was informed), was hurried up to our lines to assist in keeping the advancing force in check.

The men were so exposed they could hardly man the gun. I noticed among them a handsome young man, apparently 18 or 19 years of age, who when not engaged with his gun, would borrow rifles from the men in my regiment, rest them on the artillery piece, take deliberate aim and fire, seemingly careless of the danger he was in. I never saw a finer display of bravery for he was thus engaged while others were trying to protect themselves behind the breast-works over which they were firing.

He must have fired five or six times when he was shot through the body with a minnie ball; and fell, apparently dead.

In the excitement of the occasion and where there are so many dead, I forgot him. In about half an hour afterwards, and a little before dark I was wounded myself and went to the rear. Late at night I found myself at a farm house, where a hospital had been established. A Mr. Hobson lived there I think. In the meantime our Army, under cover of darkness, had retreated, leaving us behind. The yard was strewn with the wounded and dead. The kitchen, out-houses, and even the stables were filled.

I observed that the front door of the main house was open, and entering the hall I turned in the first door to the right and was able to distinguish through the darkness that this room was also occupied by the wounded.

I found one vacant place and spreading my blanket, prepared for the night.

The soldier nearest me seemed to be in the agony of death; he was tossing about all night, and though he could not speak above a whisper; I could hear that he was calling on some dear loved one far away. I gave him water and to my inquiry he replied he was suffering very much. I then asked him of whom he was thinking and I think he said his sister, giving her name as Annie. When morning came I found that my companion was the brave artillery boy of the evening before.

For three days all of us remained there unattended by surgeons or nurses. I did all I could to alleviate his sufferings but it was heart-rending to hear him calling on his loved ones at home. I learned his name was Minor, the first name I have forgotten if I ever heard.

The third or fourth day we were sent to Farmville. I preceded young Minor several hours, we were placed in different wards and I never saw him again; nor have I ever heard whether he recovered or not, but frequently since have I in my mind seen that brave boy on the battlefield, with flashing eyes and flushed cheeks, fighting for his native land; and often have I pictured what must have been the agonizing thought of his dear loved ones, could they have witnessed the suffering and heard the distressed cries of that wounded and perhaps dying boy.

Mr. Hobson and his family were just as kind to us as they could be, but stripped of all their worldly goods, both Armies having passed by and raided them, they could do but little. They were ready to share their last morsel with us.

Yours,

G. F. EDWARDS

Young Minor (415), recovered and in 1894, when he was made Colonel of the Second Regiment of Arkansas State Guards (he was then living in Newport, Ark.), the piece written by Mr. G. F. Edwards to Col. W. H. Stuart was sent to the "Evening Herald," Newport, Ark., by me (John B. Minor—417), and the following is an article from that paper, April 24, 1896.

We are proud to state that the "brave and handsome youth" referred to in the above is no other than our fellow townsman, L. Minor, Col. of the Second Regiment of Arkansas State Guards, and we feel safe in saying that this short sketch of his life will be read with interest by all who know him. There is another incident connected with this same affair which Col. Minor would like to have some light thrown upon, and it is this: He says that when he regained consciousness after receiving the wound (mentioned by Mr. Edwards), he found a note pinned to the inside of his shirt, requesting that in case of his death some one would give him a decent burial, and a five dollar gold piece was enclosed in the note to pay the expenses. He still has the gold coin and hopes he may now be able to learn where it came from.

What young Minor says himself:

I remember I was carried, after I was wounded, to a black-smith's shop close by the battlefield, on the evening of April 7th, 1865, and from there to the Hobson house. While at the black-smith's shop, Dr. Bird, Regimental Surgeon, was brought in. I asked him if he could do anything for me and he said, "No, but if they would dig a hole you would be ready for it by the time they got through." If I had had a stick I would have punched him in the head with it. After awhile I went off in a sweet dream and when I came to consciousness I was in the Hobson house on the right hand side. The note with the money was put in my shirt while in this house.

Lancelot Minor, July 4, 1907.

ANDREW JACKSON MINOR (166)

The fourth son of Garret Minor (61), of Fredericksburg, was Andrew Jackson Minor; he died in St. Louis, Mo., I think. In the last few years I have understood that though a pronounced Jacksonian Democrat, he was Chief Clerk in the St. Louis P. O. for a great number of years through all party changes.

I think the following anecdote on him worth relating:

The back yard of his father's house in Fredericksburg extended down to the river, and on a winter's day the children of a neighbor's playing upon the ice, broke in and were in danger of being drowned, when Andrew Jackson Minor, then a youth of fifteen or sixteen years, came to the rescue and saved two or three lives at the risk of his own life.

The following summer President Andrew Jackson passed through Fredericksburg and the boy was presented to him as a namesake and his gallant conduct in saving the children related. "We will do something for him," said the "Old Tyrant" and presently came his appointment as a Cadet at West Point.

The above was given me by Mr. Thomas S. Watson (189).

Marriage of Patsy Minor (63), and Rebecca Minor (67), to Robert and John Quarles.

"My mother, Sally Minor Watson (64), used to tell the following story of the marriage of her two sisters, Patsy Minor and Rebecca Minor, to the two brothers, Robert and John Quarles, both married the same day. Rev. William Douglas was a near neighbor of Mr. Garret Minor (23), of "Sunning Hill." The place at which Mr. Douglas lived, about a mile away from "Sunning Hill," was called "Ducking Hole," and joined the "Sunning Hill" land. The sand of the creek between the two places was very treacherous. Do you know when the Revolution came on, Mr. Douglas, a Colonial Clergyman of the Established Church, whose loyalty (I despise that word—sounds so much like royalty and the stupid Yankees constantly talking about Loyalty to the Government, as if the Government was Master and not the People), did not permit his going into the rebellion, returned like a canny Scotchman to his native land, but left his wife and child (Peggy Douglas) here; whereby his estates were saved from confiscation.

When Patsy and Rebecca were to be married, Mr. Douglas was exceedingly old and helpless and the girls were very anxious that the ceremony should be performed by some more fashionable minister; but your great-grandfather, Garret Minor (23), said that if they were married at "Sunning Hill," they should be married by Mr. Douglas, who had married all the others, and he should not be subjected to the mortification of being overlooked on this occasion; so the horse cart was sent to fetch him; a young man riding in the cart and supporting him in an arm chair. There was a large company, some confusion and Mr. Douglas very slow, so that the two couples were getting weary of standing before him, when it began to be whispered that Mr. Douglas was not up to the occasion. When he was about half way through it was pointed out that he was marrying John Quarles to Patsy instead of to Becky; then the old man had to begin at the beginning again and so it went, until there were symptoms that Mr. Douglas was physically too feeble to get through with the business. Then your great-grandfather, Garret Minor, caused a young man to stand at the old gentleman's elbow with a glass of "toddy," from which he sipped now and then, lamenting his age and his infirmities, but the stimulant roused and sustained him, and the ceremony being through with, he addressed them in a well prepared lecture on the way they should bring up their children.

My mother, Mrs. David Watson (Sally Minor—64), said it was clear that they were not rightly married at all, and they had to "sort themselves."

GENERAL JOHN MINOR

The following letter from Peter Minor (29), to Gen. John Minor (38). Gen. John Minor studied law at "Springfield," and was in the Legislature when he was 22 years old. The following letter to "Jack" is copied from the original in the possession of Miss Mary Blackford (111), of Lynchburg, Va.

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 25, 1783.

Dear Jack:

I now sit down to apologise for not answering your former Favours; unwell, then business. You ought to know, my dear Jack, that when a man undertakes a piece of business or practices a profession he ought to apply his whole time to it or he may not be master of it 'til old age creeps on him. I mean my own situation, had it been agreeable to my friends to have allowed me to chuse what I now profer it would have been greatly to my interest and I make no doubt to their satisfaction. But our parents and friends very seldom consult our inclinations, though perhaps it may be for our advantage. I will inform you in my next what I have been doing here and what I intend to do in the future and at the same time my dear Jack you remember to inform me what you are doing etc. etc. and how you come on in your Assembly. Your bills passed and thrown out etc. Motions made etc. As the old Gentleman may not allow you or an opportunity may not offer for him to send you pocket cash let me know and I will send you a few guinies, but not to sport with Jack, mind that: a gamster in my opinion is the most despicable being that exists: at the same time I think a young fellow ought not to be stinted in any rational pleasure. As to your first bill for the emancepating the slaves I think it met with a very good fate. Your second bill I so far agree that emigration should be encouraged, but dead against admitting foreigners to office. Your third bill I say nothing about for the merchant is most generally the moneyed man; and therefore he would make the planter pay in the end. I have written you a long scribble. I do not know whether you can make it out or not. I was obliged to write in a hurry as Mr. Call is waiting.

I forgot you were a lawyer therefore you can interpret for the best.

I am, dear Jack your Affectionate uncle,

Peter Minor

The following is a copy of a letter from Mr. Jefferson to Peter Minor (66):

“Monticello,” Aug. 15, 1813.

Dear Sir:—

I received yesterday the enclosed act for the assessment of Congressional taxes. I see by that act that a collector and principal assessor are to be appointed for our District (Nelson, Amherst, Albemarle and Fluvanna). The former office is of little concern to those who mean to pay punctually; but the principal assessor is all important, because the sum to be paid by our district being fixed by law, he is to divide it among the taxable of the district according to his estimate of their property. It is highly interesting to us then, that a just and capable character free from party or personal bias be named. If indeed he is to be governed by the State assessment pro-rata this rule for his government would secure us all. This will depend on his instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury. If this leaves him at large our only reliance will be on his character. I propose to consult with as many persons as I can acquaint in the district to fix on the person whom we shall recommend to the President. May I be permitted to undertake your acceptance of it? The whole duties will be performed at your own home except the 25 days hearing appeals prescribed in the 12th section; besides some smaller perquisites in other sections. The 30th fixes the principal emoluments, which are indeed not a great object, but perhaps not entirely inadequate for service to be done at ones home and ease. Will you think of this and return the act with your answer before Tuesday night as on Wednesday I expect to set out to Bedford, and at Warren and on my road there I shall have an opportunity of consulting with some whose opinion will be of weight. Accept assurance of my friendship and respect.

DEATH OF MR. JEFFERSON

Charlottesville, Va., July 4, 1826.

Dear Skinner—

I give you a mere line to say that Mr. Jefferson expired today at 10 minutes before one o'clock. It is an event which has been hourly expected for three or four days past.

Your friend,

(Signed) Peter Minor

American Farmer, Vol. 8, page 128, I. S. Skinner, Editor.

Baltimore, Md., July 7, 1826.

The above letter to the Editor conveys the only intelligence yet received of the Death of one of the most illustrious benefactors of his species that ever lived in any age. It will be seen that he lingered until the Fourth instant,—as if Providence had spared him to reach the fiftieth celebration of that Declaration of Independence, and of free principals which of itself must suffice to secure immortal renown to its author, and then to expire amidst the grateful benedictions and hosannas of a whole nation. The writer of the letter was a near and much esteemed neighbor and friend of the deceased.

John Minor.

. John Minor named as his Executrix and Executors, his wife, his son, John, and his friends, John Carr and John Waller. Witnesses to will, John Goodloe, David Davenport, and J. Ph. Venable.

This John Minor received the Crown Grant for the "Gale Hill" estate, amounting to 400 acres on Aug. 9th, 1735. On this same date John Waller, Jr. (no doubt, son of one of his executors), received a Crown Grant for 400 acres of land lying between the "Gale Hill" estate and the lands of William Carr. There is a deed in possession of the "Gale Hill Minors," showing that this John Minor obtained possession of the "Waller Grant" on April 26th, 1748, thereby increasing the "Gale Hill" estate to 800 acres of land, which he willed to his son, James Minor. The original grant of the "Gale Hill" lands to John Minor, is at "Gale Hill."

The folloming lines were composed by G. H. Randolph, an old beau of Miss Virginia Minor (214), and afterwards a General in the Confederate Army. At a party at "Dunlora," Albermarle Co., Va., in 1839, he insisted upon her singing them at the piano. This was, of course, after she had discarded him.

Now I have been flung sky high
 And more than that
 The girl whose praises I have sung
 Said no, said no, and I feel flat
 And if a girl again cheats me
 Exceedingly smart I guess she'll be
 For I have cut my eye teeth now, now, now
 And I have cut my eye teeth now.

Now like the bumble bee I roam
 Just when and where I please
 Gathering sweets from every grove
 And humming round each flower I love
 And dancing in each breeze, breeze, breeze
 And dancing in each breeze.

Given to me by one who was at the party.
